1. Technical Field The present invention relates to an air-fuel ratio control apparatus that controls an air-fuel ratio of an internal combustion engine, in particular, to the air-fuel ratio control apparatus that controls the air-fuel ratio in accordance with an output of a feedback air-fuel ratio sensor.

2. Description of the Related Art As a conventional air-fuel ratio control apparatus, an air-fuel ratio control apparatus is proposed that learns an initial value for correcting a deviation of an air-fuel ratio from a reference air-fuel ratio to be detected, and then uses the learned initial value as a correction value for correcting the detected air-fuel ratio (for example, refer to Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2004-128365). The air-fuel ratio control apparatus proposed in Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2004-128365 uses as the initial value a value obtained by extrapolating a deviation of an output of a feedback air-fuel ratio sensor from a center value of the reference air-fuel ratio to be detected in the vicinity of the center value. However, the air-fuel ratio control apparatus proposed in Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2004-128365 fails to maintain the accuracy of a correction value if the feedback air-fuel ratio sensor is deteriorated by aging. In particular, a case where an output value of the feedback air-fuel ratio sensor becomes higher than a target air-fuel ratio than the reference air-fuel ratio due to deterioration of the feedback air-fuel ratio sensor may happen. If the output value of the feedback air-fuel ratio sensor is higher than the target air-fuel ratio, the correction value calculated from the learned initial value becomes excessively large. In the worst case, the correction value may exceed the reference air-fuel ratio, and as a result, the air-fuel ratio may be shifted to a side of rich. As a result, the air-fuel ratio control apparatus may be unable to control the air-fuel ratio. The present invention is made in view of the above problem, and
